

Three Ways to Fall in Love (the Poet Magnet)

© 1996 by R. Bowdon

key of D - tempo 87 - 4/4 time

intro

D A C G Em7 A7 D A7

Well they can read my mind across a crowded room

They cut through a lie just like a laser

Her dazzling eyes / that cut through a lie

Can sparkle and shine when I amaze her

Their warmth reminds me of the noonday sun

Glowing and knowing and wise

I always fall in a trance / when I look in her eyes

Chorus

And her eyes / become a magnet / pulling me in / pulling me in

I'll never understand it here I go again / here I go again

The notes rise gently as her song begins / As clear as crystal in water Emotions to share / caressing the air / voice like the angels had taught her Softly she sings now let those harmonies ring / tug my heartstrings along I always feel my heart melt / just hearing her song

verse break

Her words drop smoothly like pearls on a string / A fine, compressed evocation
Can light what is true / and show it to you / express despair and elation
She holds a mirror to evil and good / the wretched, sublime, and absurd Oh I feel that poetry's power / just hearing her words

last chorus: repeat last line, slowing